District elementary science coordinator Peggy Willcuts recently received the Washington State Laser 2006 Science Education Advocate Award and a $5000 check to use for district science related educational activities.

"I have the vision that we could empower each student to become a scientifically literate person - someone who has an understanding of science and the nature of science such that it allows them the excitement and passion for the world around them," Willcuts said.

She has dedicated her professional career to serve as an advocate of science education in Washington State by working at the local, regional, state and national levels for education reform. "Paperless" Board Meetings

Superintendent Rich Carter, School Board President Anne Golden and Vice President Toni Rudnick review information on their computers at last night's school board meeting as part of the district's new "Paperless" board meetings.

Grant makes walking to Blue Ridge safer

Blue Ridge students who walk and ride bikes to school will have safer routes thanks to a recent awarding of a $117,000 grant. In a report to school board members last night, organizers detailed the plans to improve sidewalks, curbing and dangerous gravel areas near the school west of 9th Street.

The movement to improve the areas started with a training from the Blue Mountain Safe Kids program which organized an activity to help students learn more about safety and proper ways to walk and bike to school. Blue Ridge students and staff also participated in a neighborhood clean up effort which further identified the need to improve walking and biking conditions near the school.

A new sidewalk from 9th Street to Blue Ridge is expected to be in place by fall. Other areas near the school will be improved by the start of the 2007-08 school year as well.

Special thanks to parent Kathy Farrell-Guizar, Blue Mountain Safe Kids Coordinator Debi Alessio and the Blue Ridge staff for their support of this project.

Garrison teacher shares Japan Fulbright experiences

In what she described as a life changing experience, Garrison reading teacher Grace Ogoshi-Maher reported on her trip to Japan earlier this year as part of the Japan Fulbright Memorial Fund Teacher Program. Grace was one of 600 educators, out of 2,300 applicants, to participate.

She traveled to selected host cities where they had direct contact with Japanese teachers and students in an effort to promote greater intercultural understanding between the two nations.

Grace said teachers in Japan are highly respected. She said since Japan has limited natural resources, education is considered the country's highest priority. She was impressed by the students' behavior, honesty and determination to receive an outstanding education.

Legislative session positive for education

Last night Superintendent Rich Carter, Business Manager Aron Rausch and Special Programs Director Laura Droke reported on the state's 2007 legislative session which ended last week.

According to the report, the session was positive for public education. Funding was made available for all-day Kindergarten at schools with high poverty rates, health care allocations appear to have kept pace with inflation, an increase was given for fuel, utilities and other non-employee related costs, and I-728 funding will increase across the state.
