

Japan trip changes the way Walla Walla High School students view the world

(L-R) Walla Walla High School students Andrew Zahl, Kelsey Gabel and teacher Rob Ahrens report to the school board on last summer's trip to Japan as part of the Yamate Student Exchange program.

Nineteen Walla Walla High School students participated in the two week trip. The students stayed with host families, learned about the culture and were able to do a lot of sight-seeing. Teacher William Calhoun also presented to the school board and traveled to Japan as a chaperon.

“The trip changed the way I view the world. When you spend this much time with people it breaks down the stereotypes and allows you to really learn the culture. It's an eye opening experience.”

Greenways online courses available

Walla Walla High School Assistant Principal Kirk Jameson reported to school board members last night 153 students from throughout the state are taking online courses from Greenways Academy of Washington.

Walla Walla Public Schools is in the process of finalizing an agreement with Greenways that would allow the district to serve as the host district for these online services for schools throughout state.

Jameson said many of the students who are participating are from private schools and are taking courses not offered at their schools. He said 95 of the students are from Walla Walla High School and nearly 20 from Lincoln High School.

Jameson said most of the Walla Walla Public Schools students who are taking the online classes are using them for credit retrieval. He also said students with medical conditions, a need to work and go to school and those with other special needs find Greenways courses the right fit.

“Today's students need options to meet their individual needs and Greenways provides another choice for students,” Jameson said. “Greenways allows students to learn at their own pace, at their convenience and in their own setting. This option is unique in today's world of education.”

Greenways online courses are setup as open enrollment allowing students to start at anytime. Students are allowed to take one course or a full load. Students are assigned a certificated teacher for each course and can complete the work day or night.

Walla Walla High School's Big Blue Weekend

Event helps students develop positive relationships

Last night Big Blue Weekend Program Chairs and Walla Walla High School teachers Kris Duncan and Carina Stillman reported to school board members on the event scheduled for October 1-3 at the Washington Family Ranch in Antelope, OR.

Big Blue Weekend is a school-wide retreat aimed at building positive relationships between students and with staff members. Intentionally designed activities allow students to step outside of their comfort zones, break down social barriers, and develop skills they can integrate into their lives.

All Wa-Hi students are invited to attend Big Blue Weekend, with priority registration given to freshmen and sophomores. Student Alexi Storm also reported to school board members on how the event changes lives and improves the school climate.

September 24 early dismissal only for elementary students

The early dismissal days of September 24, March 4 and June 3 are for elementary schools only. The 2010-2011 calendar incorrectly states these early dismissal dates are for all district schools, K-12.

These half-day early dismissals are to allow elementary teachers more time for conference and report card preparation. Parents are encouraged to check with elementary schools for their specific early dismissal times.

Board meetings to start at 6:30 p.m.

School board meetings will start at 6:30 p.m. beginning in October to better meet the needs of staff, parents and students.
