COVID BUDGET IMPACT

District takes measures to reduce costs following revenue shortfalls

Superintendent Dr. Wade Smith reported during last night's school board study meeting the district is addressing an anticipated $4.3M budget shortfall resulting from the impact of COVID-19 in two phases. The global pandemic and resulting campus closures are affecting many district funding streams, including an approximate 200 student enrollment dip, loss of transportation program dollars, and other revenue streams tied to enrollment such as Career and Technical Education, Special Education, local effort assistance and others.

The loss of student enrollment is primarily due to a significant number of families who have not enrolled their kindergarten students for this fall. Under normal conditions, the district would expect to welcome around 450 KG students. Current enrollment sits at 335. Executive Director for Teaching and Learning Christy Krutulis strongly encourages parents to enroll their kindergarteners this fall.

"The age appropriate program will provide all KG students the necessary social/emotional and academic experiences, allowing for a successful transition to in-person instruction as soon as viral conditions allow," said Krutulis.

Phase One of the budget savings plan trims $2.6M in expenses by reducing staff through attrition. Additionally, due to distance learning, savings have been recaptured through less need for substitutes, field trips and other transportation savings, and a shortened athletic season due to WIAA directives.

"Thankfully, seeing hints of this coming late last spring, I directed Human Resources to freeze all non-essential hiring when vacancies arose," said Superintendent Smith.

"While it is true that WWPS is facing similar financial challenges as most districts across the state, what I can attest is not the same is the manner by which we come together, band together and problem solve together, in order to overcome these obstacles."

"As a result of this proactive stance, we have already saved $1.5M in salary/benefits this year by not replacing 26 classified, certificated, administrative and central office staff."

Phase Two trims expenses by $1.7M primarily through temporary classified staff layoffs, furloughs and state incentive programs. Certificated teachers and administrative employees are protected from layoffs this late into the year by state law.

Superintendent Smith and his team worked closely with the Public School Employees bargaining group to limit the impact on staff by continuing to offer benefits to employees and maximizing the state's Shared Work Program.

The district's proactive approach to budgeting has put the district in line to meet the $4.3M loss.

"We will get through this and times will get better," said Superintendent Smith. "Hope is on the horizon."
