

March 20 • School Board Meeting Recap

High school study focus of work session

Superintendent recommends Community Task Force

Last night during a public work session school board members began what is expected to be a lengthy process to develop a common vision for Walla Walla's high school experience.

School board President Anne Golden began the meeting explaining how post-election feedback following the rejected May 2006 bond issue pushed for this study. She said input called for more information on options for high school programs, facilities and concepts.

Numerous common themes surfaced from the school board's "Listening Campaign" including:

- Replace vs. remodel existing Wa-Hi buildings
- Second high school option
- College Place High School (future potential)
- Alternative Education (including Vocational Tech Center)
- Athletic facility options

Golden said it will be important from the outset to identify what outcomes this study is expected to produce and to develop parameters to help ensure the work is done efficiently.

Superintendent Rich Carter detailed an organization plan for creating a community led Task Force to oversee and manage the study. His plan includes a school board led process for identifying task force leaders and members.

Carter recommended a third-party facilitator to help maintain objectivity and provide support to the task force. His plan also calls on district administrators and staff to serve as technical advisors.

Golden said the next step is to develop a timeline for the next several months to keep the process moving along.

Energy program continues to save

The district continues to save money and support strategies to conserve energy, according to a report last night from Energy Manager John Butenhoff.

The district began the program in 1999 and Year Seven tallies reported last night reveal nearly a $2 million savings to the district. This represents a 26 percent "Total Energy Cost Avoidance," according to Butenhoff's report.

Education of staff regarding conservation strategies has been a key factor in the success of the program, according to Butenhoff.

"We have established an energy ethic with each teacher, employee, and administrator," Butenhoff said. "People determine and control the use of energy. I want to recognize our staff's efforts."

Management and detailed accounting make up the other components of the program.

School Retirees Appreciation Week

March 19-25

School board member and Walla Walla/Columbia School Retirees Association member Mary Jo Geidl read a proclamation from Governor Gregoire recognizing School Retirees Appreciation Week.

Geidl then presented current association president Joan Helm with the proclamation and thanked her for her efforts to advance public education and the teaching profession.
