

Superintendent Carter announces retirement

Superintendent Dr. Rich Carter announced during last night's school board meeting he plans to retire at the end of the 2009-2010 school year culminating a 37 year career.

Carter started his tenure in Walla Walla July 1, 2000. His last day will be June 30, 2010.

"When the end of the year arrives, it is my greatest hope that the legacy I leave in the Walla Walla Public Schools is a stronger organization than when I arrived," Carter said. "I want all the school board members, administrators, teachers and staff to know that my success has always been based on their success. Together, with a caring and committed staff and guidance by parents and community and business leaders, we have shaped one of the highest quality educational institutions in the state; one that we can all be proud of."

Carter received his BA from California State University at Chico, a Master's in Adaptive PE from Arizona State University, a Master's in Educational Administration from Pacific Lutheran University, and his Doctorate in Educational Leadership from Seattle University. During his career in education, Carter also worked as a classroom teacher and principal.

"Dr. Carter's contribution to Walla Walla Public Schools is greatly appreciated," School Board President Mary Jo Geidl said. "His vision for the future has led to many positive changes in the district, such as instituting all day kindergarten and teacher collaboration, overseeing construction of Sharpstein and Edison Elementary Schools, and establishing a Transportation Co-op with 90 percent funding by the state. It will be a challenging task to find a replacement for him."

School board members will begin discussions about superintendent search options. No plans have been made at this time. Carter says in retirement he and his wife Nancy plan to travel, play golf and spend more time with their two daughters, Robyn Lynn, 29 and Amy Jean, 27.

Highlights during Carter's tenure

- Improved state test scores
- All day kindergarten
- Increased teacher professional development opportunities, including Wednesday collaboration time
- Successful school elections: Edison bond and three M&O levies
- Development of S.E. Washington Transportation cooperative and Support Services facility

Ag-Issues team debates Wallula "Clean Coal" plant

Members of the Walla Walla High School FFA Agriculture Issues team, advised by teacher Arch McHie, reported to school board members last night on their state championship presentation. This year's issue debates whether a "clean coal" plant should be constructed near Wallula.

The team is tuning up for the national competition in Indianapolis, Indiana. McHie thanked the community for allowing the Ag Issues team to make public presentations in preparation for their competitions. FFA students reported they have learned a lot through this experience and are excited for nationals.

Albertsons supports Campbell's Labels for Education program

Sharpstein Elementary Principal Laure Quaresma thanked Albertsons for its support of the Campbell's Labels for Education program. Labels for Education rewards schools with cash-like points anytime Campbell's soup or other product labels are collected and submitted to the company.

Quaresma said Albertsons' contributed to the program which generated thousands of dollars for schools to use for supplies and/or equipment.
