National Geographic giant traveling map coming to Sharpstein school March 6-8

What better way to teach young people the power of maps and the limitless depth of geography than a gym-sized map on which they can explore, travel from place to place, hop around, compete, collaborate and have lots of fun?

That's exactly how local students will get to explore North America, courtesy of National Geographic, when a giant 26 by 26 foot map makes a stop at Sharpstein Elementary School next week.

The map will be located in the Sharpstein Elementary School Gym and is open without charge to the public on Friday, March 6, from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., then on Saturday and Sunday, March 7 and 8, from noon to 5 p.m. Everyone is invited. Just remember that socks are required for walking on the map.

The huge map, designed for grades K-8, tours with a trunk full of accessories, including interactive games, geography adventures, atlases and books that teach students about the physical characteristics of North America, as well as its rich history and varied cultures.

Missoula Theatre experience helps students gain confidence and improve oral language

Blue Ridge Principal Connie Taylor-Randall and ELL Specialist Brenda Kirk reported to school board members on the school's recent drama production in partnership with the Missoula Theatre. Fifty-eight students participated in the production of "Robinson Crusoe."

Kirk and Taylor-Randall teamed to raise money to bring the production to Blue Ridge. Kirk said many of the Blue Ridge families live in poverty and don't have the means to offer the performing arts to their children. She said students also improved language skills.
