

May 3 • School Board Meeting Recap

Carter thanks teachers for excellence

Dear staff members,

Teacher Appreciation Week is May 1-7 and May 3 is National Teacher Day. Please join me in paying tribute to our Walla Walla Public Schools teachers. Our teachers model learning as a lifelong process and understand that all students -- recognizing differences -- must be given equitable opportunities to reach their potential and to develop a love of learning.

Teachers are the grass roots of public education and have the greatest impact on student achievement. Our teachers spend countless hours outside their classrooms preparing lessons, evaluating progress, counseling and coaching students, and performing community service.

I encourage you this week to take time and reflect upon a teacher who made a difference in your life. Education is a way of life, not just another job. Thank you for dedicating your life to making our school district, community, nation, and world a better place to live. Strong schools equal strong communities. Thanks to our teachers for another great year.

Work session held at Paine

Bringing programs to same campus discussed

School board members held a special work session at Paine School last night to discuss facility needs and future program offerings on the Fourth Street campus.

Paine Principal Jeff Weeks showed a video of an alternative school in Rhode Island that has successfully used multiple funding sources and community resources to develop a performance-based program. The campus is open seven days a week, year round and also in the evenings. Despite high poverty and numerous social challenges facing students, the video revealed students are excelling.

Now nearly 80 years old, Paine School is facing numerous facilities needs. Several Paine School teachers joined Weeks in expressing an interest in moving the Opportunity Program to the Fourth Street campus and possibly having other social services available. Child care centers, health clinics and a teen center were mentioned during the discussion.

MGT of America cited Paine as one of the district's top priorities for modernization in last year's final facilities report to the school board.

Opportunity Program lead teacher says program best kept separate from Paine

Opportunity Program Lead Teacher Tom Porter said he and fellow Opportunity staff members prefer to stay at separate locations from Paine School. He said they more closely align with Wa-Hi and having the programs on the same campus would have a negative impact on Opportunity.

Edison students support Books for Babes

Children's books to be delivered to area hospitals Thursday

Board members were treated to a special skit last night from Edison Third Grade students in Kay Barga's class as they explained their Books for Babes program.

Each student discussed a portion of the program they organized to promote literacy with Walla Walla families who have newborns.

The students will deliver 100 book bags to St. Mary Medical Center and Walla Walla General Hospital to be sent home with mothers who recently had babies. Edison students helped raise money for the program, designed their own books and helped put the book bags together.

Book Bag Contents

The bag will contain material either in English or in Spanish, as appropriate, consisting of:

- Three commercially produced children's books
- Two books written by Edison third grade students -- one about the importance of reading to your child and the other a counting or an alphabet book.
- A book list for children ages 0-9 with -- Reasons to Read to Your Baby on the front cover and Reading Strategies on the back.
- A library card application for the parents.

Barga said next year students hope to create even more book bags so one day all newborns in Walla Walla will get one. They also want to add a video about reading. The video will feature a parent reading to the baby, a parent reading to the two-year old, and a parent listening to the beginning reader.

Special thanks to Edison Elementary staff and students for organizing this project and to volunteer Missy Peterson for her successful grant writing skills.

Opportunity continues to keep youth connected to educational programs

Opportunity Program Lead Teacher Tom Porter reported to school board members on innovations being used at this contract-based program to enhance learning.

Porter said students are taking more responsibility for their learning this year by working up to 22 hours per week on school related assignments outside of the classroom. He says it's becoming a school of choice for many students who aren't having success in other educational settings. He says the program's one-on-one teaching approach limits behavior problems and disruptions.

Porter says each student has an Individual Learning Plan and academic strategies for success.
